ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Softball has always been a part of my life for as long as I can remember. T-ball turned into baseball and that eventually turned into softball. I've been playing my whole life. But I think what was the most valuable was the lessons I learned along the way. Learning work ethic was hard, not wanting to go to practice but going anyway then feeling better after made me realize that this is what I want. The hour-long practices turned into late nights striving to be the best, working until I ran myself tired. The failure and the hardship just made those nights longer. But failure also taught me to be tough mentally and physically, and that not everything goes my way. I learned hardship and how to grow from failure. I learned that the past is the past and that you can't change it no matter how hard you try. I push myself hard on and off the field not only to earn my spot but to show people that they can rely on me and that I don't just try to get by. Softball has brought so much joy to my life and when I'm struggling, I go practice as it helps clear my head and get me in the right mindset. This isn't just a game to me, it's a piece of me. I would love to play college ball but knowing the possibility of it not happening I have academic goals such as majoring in Education with a minor in History. My second academic goal is going to college for sports management to help me become a coach as that is another one of my aspirations.
